

Definite Space: Poems

POETRY

WHEN I RUN

When I run, it doesn't mean much—it's a world with a streak across it, and I run up or down or flat along that streak to make the wind sing the way it sings sometimes to go around things. When I run, it doesn't mean there aren't roads or cars to go around, and I wear soft shoes with no place to go and only a wavering circle in mind to make the run complete.

When I run, it doesn't mean the world, except for shoes, but definite places to step—next and next-to-next—and then only a touch. When I run, slowly, it all goes past, and with it those who did right or wrong, or didn't, and Earth—it also follows a streak in space.
